Hot Tub / Cold Plunge

(only available in the women's sauna area)

Alternating between different temperatures will strengthen your immune system, improve blood circulation and activate the excretion process for those with digestive issues. Start with taking a warm shower and then immerse yourself in our cold bath alternating back and forth between the hot and cold tubs for one minute each.

Dry Sauna

Dry saunas offer very low humidity levels, allowing for higher temperatures. These higher temperatures result in an elevated degree of perspiration as well as a significant increase in heart rate, while still being safe. This reaction causes the body's metabolic levels to work harder, promoting a series of health benefits ranging from weight loss to the excretion of toxins that have built up in the body.

BENEFITS

- / Improved blood circulation and quality; blood quality improves due to the removal of toxins and an increase in oxygen levels.
- / Improves the skin while removing the impurities from deep inside.
- / Ease muscle tension and joint pain; the extreme temperatures associated with a dry sauna increase the body's secretion of endorphins, temporarily reducing and/or eliminating muscle tension and joint pain.
- / Promotes relaxation.
- / Strengthens the immune system.
- / Aids in detoxification and metabolism. Suggestion: don't include the chemicals in the excretion of toxins from the body.

Wet Sauna

Steam can be an important part of any sauna experience.

Offering higher degrees of humidity, usually around 100% the wet sauna provides the body with several benefits.

BENEFITS

- / Improved skin elasticity; the elevated humidity levels keep the skin supple and hydrated.
- / Management of respiratory problems; wet saunas can assist in the management of asthmatic conditions and allergies as well as sinus congestion, bronchitis and sinusitis by loosening the chest muscles and the mucus associated with some of these respiratory issues.
- / Promotes relaxation; the warmth and moisture created by a wet sauna melts away stress and allows for a soothing and relaxing experience.
- / Promotes a cleansing feeling; wet saunas provide intense levels of steam and moisture resulting in heightened levels of perspiration, making many people feel cleaner.

Outdoor Spa Facilities
